

How could you feel anything but good?" the director said in response to how he feels about the release of the trailer earlier this week and the special sneak peeks of footage from The Amazing Spider-Man that a select number of fans around the globe were lucky enough to attend. It was really wonderful; I mean, I enjoyed the events in particular, because it was very affirming. We've been working in our secret laboratory for so long that it's nice to get it out." "We felt it was really important to give the audience a more specific idea of what the film would look like," he added in an exclusive chat with The Hollywood Reporter. "When you do a teaser trailer it's always tricky, because we were still shooting the movie when that was being cut. This time we wanted to show Peter and Gwen a little bit more. To get to

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=54330&t=Marc_Webb_Talks_THE_AMAZING_SPIDER-MAN_Trailer_And_Designing_The_Lizard