

By: Mark Julian This week's episode saw the young superheroes go toe-to-toe with the Injustice League, which was composed of Count Vertigo, Joker, Poison Ivy, Ultra-Humanite, Atomic Skull, Wotan, and a very de-powered Black Adam. I mean seriously, Black Adam alone should be able to take out the entire Young Justice (YJ) team by himself. While I thoroughly enjoyed this episode, that was one thing that nagged at my subconscious the entire episode. Moving on, the Justice League (JLA) goes up against giant plant monsters that are a combination of tech, magic, and science thanks to the combined efforts of Ivy, Wotan, Joker (eh?), and Ultra-Humanite. Batman sends Aqualad's team to stop the Injustice League while the big guns of the JLA stop the plants, which are attacking major cities worldwide. At first, I thought this was backwards as I felt Young Justice was definitely being handed the more dangerous

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=48213&t=Mark_Julian_Reviews_emYoung_Justiceem_Episode_14_emRevelationsem