

Just as he did with Kick-Ass, Nemesis, Superior and The Secret Service; Mark Millar has announced a charity auction for his latest creation, Supercrooks. Whoever wins will have the comic's main supervillain (The Bastard) named after them. The previous auctions have made a total of $30,000 for worthwhile causes, and the proceeds from this one will once again be donated to St. Bartholomew's Primary School in Scotland. Here's a message from Mark about the upcoming auction. "We've put the money to various causes in the past, but The Secret Service auction was very special for me because the cash late last year paid for all the kids at my old primary school to go to the theatre and see a Christmas pantomime. There were over 160 kids and staff bussed from the pretty modest area where I grew up into the city and for a lot of the kids it was

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=56931>