

It was revealed last year that work is finally moving ahead on an adaptation of Mark Millar and Peter Gross' American Jesus, a story which sees a 12 year old boy discover that he is the returned Jesus Christ. Talking to The Daily Record recently, the prolific writer and creator has this to say about the big screen version of the series. "If you are doing a movie about the return of Jesus as the Bible prophesied in the Book of Revelation, you have got to do it straight and treat it with dignity. I'm not taking the piss. It will be treated like a proper film." I have never been cool. I am a Catholic and go to mass. A lot of people are surprised because much of my work is irreverent and expect the same with American Jesus. But I want it to be a beautiful film," he added. "A

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=54971&t=Mark_Millar_Talks_Millarworld_Movies_AMERICAN_JESUS_And_KICK-ASS_2_May_Shoot_This_Summer