

The Secret Service is planned to be a six issue mini-series and will be in comic book shops February of 2012. The details below are just a tease until the bulk of the information is released in January. What we currently know is that the project was co-created with Matthew Vaughn, and he'll be writing the screenplay. Matthew Vaughn is no stranger to Mark Millar's comics as he directed Millar's Kick-Ass, and owns the movie rights to Millar's other property, Superior. This must be very exciting for Mark Millar as he sent a letter out to the legendary artist Dave Gibbons in 1987. In that letter he asked him to draw one of his stories, and now the dream has come true. Dave was the co-creator and artist on the classic The Watchmen comic books. Below are his sketches for the upcoming comic, The Secret Service. "Something to do with
