

In August of 2010, on the last day of principal photography, the main man over at Collider.com, Steve Weintraub got to visit the set of Green Lantern and talked with one of the greatest villains in DC universe, Sinestro/Mark Strong. Some highlights: His hair in the movie was a two-piece prosthetic that covered the top part of his forehead. About 4 hours to apply the makeup. Strong is committed to do Green Lantern sequels. He didn't know Green Lantern well but Geoff Johns put him in the right direction and now he is slightly addicted to Green Lantern. When doing acting in front of a blue screen he uses his theater background. On stage, you know everything is fake so you are creating an illusion, so he tried to bring the same mindset to working with CGI. His absolute favorite construct were the blades used in the fight with Hal. The fight was

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Sector2814/news/?a=37449&t=Mark_Strong_Talks_Green_Lantern_On_Set