

In their latest magazine issue, SFX caught up with Marvel Comics' Chief Creative Officer Joe Quesada to discuss the ultimate road to Marvel's growing cinematic universe. Precisely teasing Iron Man 3, Thor: The Dark World, and Captain America: The Winter Soldier leading up to the inevitable sequel to The Avengers, Quesada offers: "It's going to be really interesting to see what happens next," teases Quesada. "But personally I think that The Avengers now enhances the solo movies because it was so successful. Everyone has their favourite moment or character and now it's like 'we've seen what you've got so show us some more.'" With Iron Man 3 kicking off "phase 2" of Marvel's Cinematic Universe, Quesada promised that the Shane Black-directed film will be an improvement from 2010's Iron Man 2. "It's going to have some amazing surprises," he teases. "I don't think people have any idea what it's going
