

In the following video interview Louis D'Esposito discusses various Marvel related projects, including Item 47 (the short that debuted at Comic-Con), the upcoming Blu-ray release of The Avengers, and whether there are any plans for a cinema re-release of the extended cut of that movie beforehand. But most interestingly, D'Esposito talks about Ant-Man, and reveals that Edgar Wright will try to shoot next year. He also says that Marvel have discussed the possibility of releasing smaller budget, R rated movies.. 14:07 Talks about Edgar Wright's Ant-Man test footage and being on set while Wright was filming. Says Wright will "bring all of the coolest camera angles and shots mixed in with a lot of laughs." As Wright was shooting, he was cutting it together. 15:20 Says Wright's Ant-Man might be an opportunity where they make a third film since he's shooting At World's End this year: "That might be an opportunity

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/roshachsrants/news/?a=63996>