

Considering Marvel's Joss Whedon-directed superhero extravaganza The Avengers has been in post-production for over four months now, with four months remaining until release, attaching composer Alan Silvestri's musical arrangement is likely the current stage; if not already done so. With that said, according to the Hindustan Times insiders, The Avengers production team are apparently keen on having a Hindu title song for the Indian release of the highly-anticipated film. An insider reveals that they have shortlisted two bands Euphoria and Agnee from India, and Pakistani rock outfits Strings and Jal to compose and sing the soundtrack. "They are looking for action songs, at par with the mood of the film," reveals a production insider. "The music composed by these bands will be sampled, and on the basis of that, they will decide which will finally compose the title track of the film. The final call will be taken in the next two weeks,"

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=52618&t=Marvel Reportedly Going Hindu For Title Song Of THE AVENGERS Indian Release