

Back in August, we learned that Marvel Studios scheduled two untitled movies for summer 2014. With the first scheduled for May 16 and the second one targeted for a June 27, Deadline now reports that Disney has moved up the one latter. The infamous site also suggests that Marvel Studios has updated The Avengers' movie with the ever-growing 3D; converted. Disney today sent out a few changes for upcoming releases. Marvel's The Avengers 3D updates the movie from 2D to 3D. Its May 4, 2012 opening date remains the same. Another comic-book property, Marvel Untitled is shifted to April 4, 2014 wide from June 27, 2014. Of course, there is no word on what Marvel character(s) either films are about, but it's great to know the studio is looking ahead, with their 2013 slate consisting of Iron Man 3 (May 3) & Thor 2 (November 15). And Sony already has The Amazing Spider-Man
