

I've been reading comic books on a regular basis since 2002. So, as you can imagine, I've wanted to meet Stan "The Man" Lee for a very long time. While it may sound a little melodramatic, I have him to thank for changing my life. Not only did he create arguably the greatest fictional characters ever, but without him there would more than likely be no CBM (and I wouldn't currently be doing an English and Journalism degree as a result of writing for this site). When it was announced that he would return to a UK for his first comic book convention in nearly 40 years, I knew I had to be there to meet the living legend. Thanks to the organisers of the first annual London Super Comic Convention, I got that chance, as did thousands of others. However, before I get to that, I think it's fair to

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=55386&t=Meeting_Stan_The_Man_Lee_At_The_2012_London_Super_Comic_Convention