

MTV caught up with Men in Black 3's Barry Sonnenfeld, and had a rather revealing interview with the director of the film. He gives brand new details about the story while providing a brief outline of all three acts. Sonnenfeld: In the first act, Agent J is a bit fed up with how closed K is as a person, how he feels he needs to open up and communicate more, but it's not happening. K says to J, "You know how I live such a happy life? I don't ask questions I don't want to know the answers to." At the end of the first act, Jemaine's character, Boris the Animal, breaks out of prison and finds a guy who has a time device. He says he's going back to 1969 to do something to the man who shot off his arm — because Boris only has half an arm — and

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/nailbiter111/news/?a=58234>