

Vulture is reporting that the king of orange/blue lighting and sunsets is about seal up a deal that would bring him back for a fourth Transformers. The director is currently working on a much smaller project, Pain and Gain. It is believe that Pain and Gain isn't very complex and he'll be able to work on pre-production for his fourth rock'em sock'em robots extravaganza while filming Pain. According to the insiders over at Vulture, director Michael Bay has wanted to adapt Pain and Gain almost since its publication in 1999. The sources says, "Without Pain, there's no tit for tat. That's Paramount's leverage." Paramount "does not have a closed deal" with Bay yet, but an official announcement could come as early as next week. Details on the next part of the Transformers chapter are still a secret. The site goes to say that it will go deeper into the Transformers mythos, and

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Lucaxmen/news/?a=50799&t=Michael_Bay_In_Negotiations_To_Return_For_A_Fourth_TRANSFORMERS_Movie