

Seemingly not content with Transformers and TMNT, Bay might be taking control of another iconic character, albeit a slightly more adult orientated one. We recently found out that Dimension Films' Halloween 3D wasn't going to happen. That planned follow up to Rob Zombie's previous two flicks was taken off their schedule and has been in the ""release date to be determined" drawer since. But now Bloody Disgusting report that Platinum Dunes - Michael Bays' production company responsible for bringing (inflicting on) us other horror reboot such as The Texas Chainsaw Massacre, The Amityville Horror, Friday the 13th and A Nightmare On Elm Street - may take over production.. Bloody Disgusting can exclusively report that Platinum Dunes is in talks to take the producing reigns on Dimension Films' forthcoming Halloween sequel. Word has it that Michael Myers' return will not be in 3-D, nor will it instill the popular found footage model,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrants/news/?a=57322>