

Silent Hill: Revelation is complete, according to Michael J. Bassett, the director of the upcoming 3D sequel. On his blog, Bassett explained that while the film is done, all they are doing right now is waiting for the official word from producers, to see when will the film be released: "For Silent Hill fans, I'm afraid the waiting game has truly begun for all of us. The movie is complete and is now in the hands of the producers who are deciding when and how to release the picture. I can honestly tell you that you now know as much as I do. i.e. nothing at all." Also, remember Solomon Kane? Film that was shot way back in 2008, but never got a theatrical release in US? Well, if you didn't know, Bassett directed that film too, which is of course based on the character created by Robert E. Howard.
