

Here's something pretty cool for the fans of the series of Spawn comics and even the not so well received film made about the character. Mortal Kombat: Legacy actor Michael Jai White says that he would love to return to the character of Al Simmons/Spawn as long as creator Todd McFarlane is the one running the show. It's certainly not news that Spawn creator Todd McFarlane has been pushing for some time to get a reboot film of the character made, but things are proving difficult as the director wants the film to have a hard R rating and a lot of studios just don't feel comforting fronting the money for something like that.. While at SDCC '11, Michael Jai White spoke about the possibility of returning to the character. "I hope he does [make the film]. In the next couple years I might have to produce it myself. It's a no-brainer.

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Dustin03Comics/news/?a=42530&t=Michael_Jai_White_Wants_To_Return_For_An_R-Rated_ISpawni_Film