

Source: BBC Radio: 5 Live The BBC Radio Station 5Live recently had Michael Shannon on their show to discuss his recent film, Take Shelter. But of course, the conversation inevitably turned to Man of Steel. Here's a transcript of that conversation: On his character from Take Shelter and how it compares to playing General Zod: MICHAEL SHANNON: "The only similarity, really, [that] I can think of because there really are none...but the funny thing about it is that no matter how much time or money you have on a film, you always hear people complaining about time and money or saying they don't have enough time and money. I mean, for example, there's this scene we shot recently, [a] fairly short scene, and it was scheduled for two-and-a-half days and you know, I'm talking literally a scene that's a page-and-a-half or something like that. Two-and-a-half days later and we still

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=50522&t=Michael_Shannon_Candidly_Speaks_About_The_Pressure_And_Responsibility_Of_emMAN_OF_STEELem