

Ok, I have been a supporter of Rourke's refreshing outspokenness on this but even I have to admit that whether he has legitimate beef or not he needs to just let it go now. There is a big difference between bravely expressing yourself and bitching. As he continues to promote Immortals the actor's latest interview, this time with io9, features his harshest criticism of Marvel yet.. io9: So a lot of it is finding the right director who you feel comfortable with? Rourke: I try to find the right director who won't compromise his or anyone else's integrity, and yet be political enough to give the studio what they want yet put up a fight to maintain that integrity. So we're not watching some science fiction fucking wham bam thank you ma'am Marvel piece of crap. This guy seems VERY bitter about his experiences with this studio. Clearly he doesn't care what anyone thinks
