

Back when the long awaited Sin City sequel was officially announced, director Robert Rodriguez was quoted as confirming a few returning cast members - Rosario Dawson and Mickey Rourke among them. But according to Vulture, the outspoken actor "seemed to imply that his deal had not yet closed". There are no direct quotes from Rourke on that, but he does reveal that he wasn't very keen on the prosthetics used to create Marv's brutish appearance, telling the site that they "make him feel claustrophobic". But if all of that suggests that Rourke may not be looking forward to returning to Sin City, he goes on to praise the script, admitting that he actually prefers it to the first one. And finally, as far as those rumors of him coming back for a third Expendables movie go, Rourke reckons "they're making shit up".

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsraints/news/?a=68069>