

Charlie Cox's Matt Murdock/Daredevil was adamant that criminals of all stripes needed to face judgement at the hands of NYC's legal system. The Punisher felt different. But what if the Punisher has turned up in Harlem, instead of Hell's Kitchen? One well-placed sniper bullet and Cottonmouth (Mahershala Ali) and Diamondback (Erik LaRay Harvey) are no longer around to cause Luke Cage trouble. Here's how Harlem's Hero would respond to Frank Castle's brand of justice, according to Mike Colter. "No, I'm not gonna stop him. I don't get blood on my hands but I won't stop him from taking out dirtbags. I'd let it be. I don't know if I have that thing in me that says I have to stop everyone from wiping out crime wherever it is... I wouldn't care enough to stop someone else from doing it." That's a very different philosophy that will surely lead to friction when Daredevil, Luke and possibly (probably) Frank Castle meet up in The

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/punisher/mike-colter-on-how-luke-cage-would-handle-the-punisher-a145750>