

TV Line reports that a Warner Bros. TV spokesperson confirmed that Collins would be guest appearing for episode 17 and in “at least two additional episodes” after that, but it's also said that he may not be portraying the fan-favorite Castiel. Executive producer Sera Gamble was quoted, after Castiel met his end in the series, saying, "It has always been our intention to bring back Misha in some form. We certainly can't say too much about where the story is going to go, but we love Misha and want to continue to work with him." The series follows Sam and Dean Winchester, two brothers bound by tragedy and blood to the one thing that runs through both their veins – hunting monsters. Over the past few seasons, Dean and Sam faced insurmountable obstacles. The power struggle between good and evil has raged on, with the new King of Hell, Crowley, ultimately emerging

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/TheWatchtower/news/?a=50744&t=Misha_Collins_Returning_to_SUPERNATURAL