

Geek Tyrant have spotted a report by The Digital Bits which reveals George Lucas' surprise changes to even more aspects of the Star Wars movies. In the past, this has included major changes like a completely redesigned CGI Jabba the Hutt in A New Hope and the inclusion of Hayden Christensen as Anakin Skywalker at the end of Return of the Jedi. Well, it looks like the prequels are set for a make-over as well... Once again, George has apparently added a few new "surprises" into these films. I don't know what they are and didn't get to see any of them on Friday, but I was assured that there will be "new things to notice" when we watch the films. I think we can safely assume that one of them will be the new all-digital Yoda in Episode I. Way back when Episode III was released on DVD, ILM digital effects

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=45029&t=More_Changes_Expected_On_iStar_Warsi_Blu-Rays_May_Include_A_CGI_Yoda