

Yesterday, Reel News Hawaii reported that Marvel was planning to shoot either a Namor: The Submariner movie or TV series at a new studio in Oahu. There wasn't really anything solid to back this up aside from some "buzz" around the island, but because these guys also broke the news that The Inhumans was scheduled to film there, we figured it was worth paying attention to. Well, now we have more evidence that may just confirm this initial rumor.

Production Weekly (via MCU Exchange) lists "Sub-Mariner" as one of the projects that's set to go into production. If you recall, a Production Weekly list also first brought our attention to X-Men: Supernova, and, though that title may not stick, we now know that a new X-flick is indeed on the cards. As far as figuring out if this will be a movie or a TV series goes, these lists include both - though there is speculation that it might be the mysterious John Ridley

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/namor_the_submariner/more-evidence-would-seem-to-confirm-that-marvel-has-a-namor-a149014