

Apparently Morgan Freeman will join Tom Cruise, Andrea Riseborough and Olga Kurylenko in Joseph Kosinski's Oblivion at Universal. The Sci-fi flick is based on a graphic novel which was also created by Kosinski. Deadline report that they are unsure which role Freeman will play but that it's a critical part. Freeman is no stranger to any genre really but the last fully fledged sci-fi flick he appeared in was the appalling Steven King adaptation Dreamcatcher. This movie focuses on the last man (Cruise) on a post-apocalyptic Earth, who stays behind to repair ships that hunt down and blast a virulent alien species. Michael Arndt is currently working on script re-writes that had earlier drafts by William Monahan and Karl Gajdusek. Peter Chernin and Dylan Clark are producing through Chernin Entertainment along with Barry Levine and Kosinski. Update: Variety's Jeff Schneider just tweeted: Morgan Freeman will play Malcolm Beech, the leader of the human

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrrants/news/?a=54393&t=Morgan_Freeman_Joins_Tom_Cruise_In_OBLIVION