

These two directors share some striking similarities and I think their movies definitely share some similar thematic and visual qualities. Tim Burton is a legend these days, responsible for a smattering of dark and eerie films that have left indelible impressions on the work of many noteworthy figures like Neil Gaiman and Guillermo Del Toro. Robert Rodriguez is a legend and inspirational figure in his own right. His "$7,000 film", El Mariachi won the Audience Award at the Sundance Film Festival and was the spring point for his long and successful career. Furthermore, the film inspired countless others to pick up a camera and start filming without a budget. Talk to any fan film directors and I guarantee they will cite El Mariachi as an inspiration. In this installment of Movie Magic Case Study we will be looking at each directors take on beloved and

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=43890&t=Movie Magic Case Study 6 Tim Burton Vs Robert Rodriguez>