

Crave Online recently caught up with director Nacho Vigalondo to talk on a wide variety of topics. Vigalondo was asked about his involvement with the movie Supercrooks, which will be based on the not yet released comic book by Mark Millar and Leinil Yu. He also revealed that the movie will be made in a similar fashion to one of Millar's other previously adapted movies, Kick-Ass. In that it will be shot as the comic is being released. From Crave Online: Are you doing Supercrooks next? "I'm involved in Supercrooks and Windows. Those are my next projects and it really depends on them what comes first. Those are two projects are in a really advanced situation. I didn't write them. The scripts are already made so I hope they happen. Supercrooks is not a superhero film. It's a supervillain film. Mark Millar explained to me that when you watch The Godfather, it's about criminals

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=47937&t=Nacho\_Vigalondo\_Talks\_About\_Adapting\_Mark\_Millars\_iSupercrooks