

Here we have the first of what is sure to be many casting additions for the second season of Game Of Thrones. THR report.. The Tudors actress Natalie Dormer has joined the cast of HBO's Game of Thrones for the second season, The Hollywood Reporter confirms. Dormer, who played Anne Boleyn on the Showtime drama, has been added as a series regular for the epic series based on the George R.R. Martin books. Dormer will play Margery Tyrell, a beautiful and shrewd woman from House Tyrell. She is set to marry King Robert's brother Renly Baratheon, in part to support his bid to take the Throne from King Joffrey. As many of you will know, we will also be seeing Dormer as Private Lorraine in Captain America: TFA. Fans of the show may be curious as to what Renly is doing marrying his gay lover(Loras Tyrell)'s sister. Well, as THR mention, it's all just a
