

Suicide Squad was a very divisive movie, but most fans agree that it needed a little more Joker. If nothing else, that would have at least given us a better idea as to whether or not Jared Leto's take on the Clown Prince of Crime is one we could all get behind moving forward, but thanks to DC Films Universe photographer Clay Enos, we now have a new look at the movie's take on the iconic villain. This scene is one which was cut from the theatrical version of Suicide Squad, though Warner Bros. did add it to the Extended Cut. Sadly, it was still edited down from what we saw in set photos and videos, mostly because the studio wanted to make the relationship between the two characters less abusive. What do you guys think of this new look at The Joker and Harley Quinn? Let us know that below.

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/suicide_squad/new-behind-the-scenes-image-from-suicide-squad-focuses-on-the-joker-a147371