

Maybe Ryan Reynolds will have more success with his next comic book movie. Then again, with a CBM filmography of Blade:Trinity, X-Men Origins: Wolverine, and the much maligned Green Lantern, I'm not too sure you want to bet the house on that one. [Regardless of whether you liked the film or not, Green Lantern is a financial failure] However, maybe a CBM with an intentional comedic tone will play more to Reynolds' strengths. Recently, io9 got their hands on the script for R.I.P.D. and it sounds like the lead character in the comic was tailor made for Reynolds. Here's the best of what they unearthed. In R.I.P.D., Reynolds plays Nick Walker, a Chicago cop who gets gunned down by his partner, Simon Hawes. And then Walker wakes up in the afterlife, where he's offered a chance to join a secret elite police force: the Rest In Peace Division. So

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=41094&t=New\_Details\_Emerge\_About\_Ryan\_Reynolds\_Next\_Comic\_Book\_Movie