

The last two seasons of Arrow, by most accounts, were severely underwhelming, with the death of Katie Cassidy's Black Canary and the fourth season finale receiving an unprecedented amount of backlash from fans. However, there's some reason to be optimistic that this season turns out differently (although, to be fair, that's what many said about last year), especially with the showrunners more or less taking Oliver back to the basics and dialing way down on the mystical side of things, which never really suited the show's MO. Unlike its sister show, The Flash, there's only one extended trailer for next week's installment of Arrow, which introduces Oliver's new team of ragtag heroes, consisting of Mr. Terrific, Wild Dog, and Artemis. Check it out below: SUIT UP - Oliver's (Stephen Amell) new recruits for Team Arrow are Curtis (Echo Kellum), Wild Dog (guest star Rick Gonzalez) and Evelyn Sharp (guest star Madison McLaughlin). Unfortunately, the Green Arrow's training methods prove to be too much
