

The Power Rangers movie character designs for the likes of Alpha-5, Rita Repulsa, the Zords and the Rangers themselves haven't gone down too well with a lot of fans, and Goldar's new look is probably the most drastic alteration to the original's appearance yet. The TV take on this baddie was actually one of the cooler looking creatures on the show, coming across like a pretty scary amalgamation of the titular beast from An American Werewolf in London and G'mork from The Neverending Story in gold armor - but the movie version seems to have gone for this melted candle look instead. Of course, this is just a toy, so Goldar will probably look a lot better when we see him up on the big screen... right? Saban's Power Rangers follows five ordinary high school kids who must become something extraordinary when they learn that their small town of Angel Grove – and the world – is on the verge of being obliterated by an

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/sci-fi/new-power-rangers-reboot-toy-images-provide-our-first-look-at-redesigned-a147596>