

On the amount of IMAX in the film. Bale: No bloody idea. Ask him about that. I'm not an actor that tends to care. I don't ask "Is this a close up? Is this a master? Is this a wide? What are you doing?" If I look up and notice the camera I go "Oh, it's a big one today, must be an IMAX." And that's kinda it for me because it doesn't affect what I'm doing. On the hype surrounding the film and whether he ever thought he'd return without Christopher Nolan directing. Bale: I knew it was going to happen for me because I was contracted to do this film. I had no choice, I would have been sued up the ying-yang and be on the street and penniless if I hadn't done it. Chris, my understanding was, could have chosen not
