

Outing the extended minute-long Super Bowl ad roughly two weeks ago, an up-to-date theatrical trailer for Marvel Studios' "best outing yet," The Avengers, is very well much-needed. And with Andrew Stanton's John Carter flick nearing its March 9th release, placing an exclusive Avengers trailer in front of it, a la WB's The Dark Knight Rises prologue and Mission Impossible 4, would be a smart distributive move on Disney's part. Now accordingly, I stumbled across the following via The Avengers' German Facebook profile, making things official. BAAAM! In a week it's finally back so far: A brand new trailer from Marvel's the Avengers will be published next Wednesday at 6 pm. Who do you see more in this trailer? (Translated by Bing) Considering the German Facebook page is the only one saying so, this new trailer will more than likely be German-dubbed. Of course, they could be the first
