

The Dark Knight Rises was released last weekend, and while fans really didn't need another reason to go see the film they got one. During San Diego Comic Con there was confirmation that Man Of Steel, Zack Snyder's Superman film, would be debuting its first teaser. Upon seeing the teaser fans have welcomed it with both praise and skepticism. Most of the skepticism came from people seeing the Comic Con footage that has been bootlegged on line with complaints that it wasn't as good as that. According to the Superman Super Site, we should be getting a second trailer for Man Of Steel before the years end. Their information tells them that the full length trailer will be attached to Peter Jackson's The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey. They have also been told to expect some of the same footage that was shown at Comic Con, although it was unclear exactly how
