

I'm sure the horror hounds among you will have seen, or at least heard of, Kightbreed. It was a 1990 horror/fantasy flick directed by Clive Barker and based on his own novella Cabal. The movie was a critical and commercial failure but went on to garner a bit of cult status. It's actually not too bad, only losing it's way completely towards the end. There was certainly the potential there for a very good movie, especially considering the book it's based on is so enjoyable. It also spawned a brilliant comic series from Epic. Anyway, now it seems we might be getting a tv series. Barker revealed the following in an interview posted to his blog.. "We are also actively in conversation about doing a Nightbreed television series which will be for cable, so it will have a chance to be as sexy or as graphic in terms of the violence as

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrrants/news/?a=57136>