

Nike filed a patent for this invention in 2009, but this is the first sign that Marty's shoes from 2015 will be making their debut very soon. The shoes will carry the same name as the did in the film, Nike Air Mags. The news is still just breaking, Nike must of let some information slip though. Kevin Durant recently tweeted that he needed new shoes and finished the tweet with, "Think McFly Think." While today, one of the producers of the trilogy eluded to big news coming on the Back to the Future front, and then just tweeted the video below.
