

In late November mi6-hq.com reported that the production crew had been purchasing lots of VW Beetles. None of these vehicles are expected to make it through filming, and will most likely encounter a grim fate. Now, we have our first glimpse, and confirmation that lots of VW Beetles will in fact play a role in Skyfall. The VW Beetles pictured above at Royal Portbury Dock are heading to Turkey for the new James Bond movie Skyfall. The racks shrouded in blue on the Land Rovers are camera mounts. The Beetles were spotted by Daily Press reader Gary Williams, from Weston-super-Mare. He said, "The Beetles are all attached by special hitches to the Land Rovers for filming purposes, I guess so that they can go where Beetles cannot normally go." - westonsupermarepeople.co.uk Alright so that means these Beetles are in for a rough time in Turkey. So where in Turkey is this opening sequence
