

Source: MTV Geek Speaking to MTV Geek, Jeph Loeb had a pretty lengthy conversation about Marvel's upcoming plans for television including forays into anime, cartoons and live-action. Here's an excerpt from the interview. There's tons more over at MTV Geek so be sure to head over there to read the entire transcript. MTV Geek: One of the first places Marvel TV has dipped their toes in the water is the Anime shows, which are currently running on G4... What's the general update on the shows, and why was that an important first push? JL: Well, I don't know if it was the first push for Marvel TV, it was kind of the thing that came out in front. When I took over Marvel Television about a year and a half ago, it was a project that had been started by Simon Phillips at Marvel. It was a partnership that had been made

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=48172&t=NYCC_11_emJeph_Loebem_Discusses_emMarvelsem_TV_Future