

The folks from Io9 have now weighed in with their coverage from the much-anticipated panel for The Avengers at this year's New York Comic Con. Revealing a few descent lines of dialogue between Mark Ruffalo's Bruce Banner and Scarlett Johansson's Black Widow, not included in earlier reports, read the witty Joss Whedon-written well-paced exchange down below! A little girl runs down the street, through a nondescript Middle Eastern village and into a city. She runs upstairs into a crowded house and starts begging for help from the doctor. The camera pans to reveal Bruce Banner (Mark Ruffalo) standing over a group of very sick patients. He asks if her family has what these poor folks have as well. She says yes and holds up a fist of cash. Bruce follows her. Cut to Bruce and the little girl standing in front of a rundown shack. She runs forward, but Bruce holds her back

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=48279&t=NYCC_11_More_Detailed_Description_From_iThe_Avengersi_Footage_Screened