

The official Star Wars Twitter account has just debuted a brand new trailer for the second half of Star Wars Rebels' third season, and there's plenty here to get fans of the Disney XD animated series very excited indeed. His appearance has been teased for a while now, but here we finally get our first look at Obi-Wan Kenobi, who will be voiced by both James Arnold Taylor as the younger, Ewan McGregor-inspired version, and Stephen Stanton (Admiral Radus in Rogue One) as the more Alec Guinness-influenced incarnation. Check out the trailer below, which also includes a glimpse of Mon Mothma, Sabine wielding a Darksaber, and much more. Star Wars Rebels will be back with an hour-long, two-part special on Saturday (8:30-9:30 p.m. ET on Disney XD), that'll feature the return of Forest Whitaker as Saw Gererra.
