

Actor Tom Cruise recently wrapped production on Oblivion, a science fiction epic based on the graphic novel by Joseph Kosinski (director of TRON: Legacy), who's also helming the movie. The film (Which also stars Morgan Freeman, Olga Kurylenko, Andrea Riseborough, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau and Melissa Leo) was originally slated for a July 10th, 2013; however, Universal Pictures then moved the project to an April 26th release after slating Jurassic Park 3D for a July release. Now, Variety's Jeff Sneider reports that Universal has set yet another release date for Oblivion. The sci-fi film is now slated for April 19th, 2013, a week earlier than the April 26th date. Additionally, Sneider reveals that the movie will see an exclusive IMAX release a week before the primary theatrical version arrives. BREAKING: Universal to release MAMA on Jan. 18 & RUSH on Sept. 20, 2013. OBLIVION moves to April 19, 2013 w/ IMAX Exclu on April
