

MTV caught up with Olivia Thirlby at this years Sundance Film Festival to talk about her role as Judge Anderson in Pete Travis' Dredd. Suprisingly enough she reveals that they wrapped filming over a year ago saying it has been a slow process putting the film together. She also talked about the challenges of shooting a film like Dredd saying she need to learn how to shoot a gun with out looking like a spaz. Get More: Movie Trailers, Movies Blog On Shooting Dredd: We were shooting that a year ago, its taking a long time. That's what I was blonde for. It was a really fun time. I feel like I've done it and had that experience. I did three action scifi movies and it's definitely very different from shooting a film like NOBODY WALKS. Its very very fun, very challenging, and very hard work. It's a whole different set of challenges because

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=53521&t=Oli via Thirlby Talks DREDD