

What Culture (via Total Film) point out that the six minute prologue for The Dark Knight Rises will be screened in only five UK IMAX screens alongside Mission Impossible: Ghost Protocol. Those are Bradford's National Media Museum, Glasgow's Science Centre, London's BFI IMAX, London's Science Museum and Manchester's ODEON IMAX. The reason for this somewhat disappointing turn of events is that Warner Bros. and Christopher Nolan have taken the decision to restrict the preview to 70mm projection IMAX cinemas, widely considered to be the best way to view movies filmed specifically for the format. The prologue for The Dark Knight back in 2008 was never officially released online, and it's likely that many fans will have to rely on internet bootlegs if they wish to see the footage. Mission Impossible: Ghost Protocol is released in the US on December 16th and a new trailer for The Dark Knight Rises will be attached

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=50488&t=Only_Five_UK_Cinemas_Will_Screen_THE_DARK_KNIGHT_RISES_Prologue