

It's the weekend CBM community and you know what that means! It's time to kick back, relax, and have a little fun as we bring you ideas and content from outside the box. Previously, we had a ton of fun looking at all the superhero cartoon openings of the '90s. I wasn't surprised by the winner but I was surprised by the winning margin. Batman: The Animated Series was a runaway winner, taking out strong contenders such as X-Men and Spider-Man. Now we'll take a look at fan films, some of which have a cult following bigger than you can probably imagine. Films such as Grayson, World's Finest, Batman: Dead End, and Troops show that you don't necessarily need a big budget and costly SFX to make a film that will appeal to the nerd enthusiasts of the world. Some fan film productions go on

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=47002&t=OPINION_POLL_The_Greatest_Fan_Films_Of_All_Time