

The Conjuring's Patrick Wilson was recently added to the cast of Aquaman, and in an interview with WBT to promote the release of The Hollow Point, the actor talked for the first time about taking on the role of Ocean Master. He obviously didn't provide any specifics, but expressed his excitement to star in a movie which will utilise groundbreaking technology to take the action into the depths of Atlantis. "What's gonna be interesting is there hasn't been the technology to back up the storytelling, I guess, for Aquaman," Wilson said, adding: "until now." As for what it will be like to reunite with director James Wan, the actor went on to explain that's a big part of why he joined the DC Comics movie. "And for me, of course, I'm completely biased with James Wan, who I've done four films with -- knowing that he's at the helm and knowing what he ... can do and what he will do, I'll

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/aquaman/patrick-wilson-comments-on-his-role-as-ocean-master-in-aquaman-and-a147561>