

Paul Bettany and director Scott Stewart answered fans questions at a Fangoria Q&A held at Sony's Lincoln Square theater in New York last night. Below is just a portion of what actor Paul Bettany had to say. On working with Director Scott Stewart... "I'm a big fan of Scott's. We made a movie before for very little money, and he was given the chance to make a movie with me and three times the budget, and I thought, 'Wow!' To be able to see, to be able to be a part of seeing Scott really realize his vision onscreen and have some really great paints and a much broader canvas was a really exciting idea for me. And I loved the part. It's a big departure for me -- you know, the sort of stoic, the sort of classical, tight-lipped man of few words... The idea to be that tough guy was attractive

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GulfCoastAvengers/news/?a=35595&t=Paul_Bettany_On_Playing_the_Tough_Guy_in_i_Priest