

The first trailers for Spider-Man: Homecoming are finally here, and well, it's fair to say that they're amazing (pun most definitely intended). As well as providing plenty of shots of the wall-crawler in action, we get to see The Vulture swooping into battle as well, and it appears as if former Batman Michael Keaton is really going to deliver the goods when it comes to playing a truly despicable villain. Emphasising the fact that the reboot is set in the Marvel Cinematic Universe is the fact that both Tony Stark and "The Avengers" (well, bank robbers dressed as them) show up, and things end with an amazing shot of Spidey and Iron Man travelling through New York together. The shorter international version meanwhile provides a first look at The Shocker, and in this scene at least, he has no costume. Well, his jacket has some yellow on it, but he's certainly not rocking the character's classic look! Regardless, it's fair to say that

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/spider-man/peter-parker-goes-to-war-with-the-vulture-in-two-spectacular-trailers-a147391>