

Last night we finally got to see the highly anticipated third trailer for The Dark Knight Rises. This one offered up a lot more in the way of plot and dialogue, as well as some great action. There was also quite a melancholy vibe to it, bolstered by a nice, spine tingling score. We had a few new glimpses of Tom Hardy's Bane, but this trailer definitely put the focus more on Anne Hathaway as Catwoman, and for the first time, the mysterious John Blake played by Joseph Gordon Levitt. Personally I loved it, but some fans seemed a little disappointed that the final trailer didn't deliver a bit more spectacle, and could have maybe used one more "wow" moment to really heighten anticipation. What do you think?
