

Both The Green Hornet and Thor were two great comic book movies and with X-Men: First Class, Green Lantern and Captain America: The First Avenger all on the way within the next few months, there's no doubting that 2011 is one of best years ever for comic book movies. However, all of these have one thing in common. The reimagining of the costumes the characters are all best known for. Not one of them is 100% identical to their comic book counterparts, and as with most adaptations, this is understandable in order to create a realistic look for the big screen. However, which do you think is the best? Which does the best job of bringing the iconic costumes to life for us to enjoy on the big screen in live action? Here's your chance to vote and share your thoughts. The Green Hornet THOR X-Men: First Class Green Lantern Captain America: The First Avenger Thanks for voting,
