

Joss Whedon did a lot of things right in The Avengers, but probably his biggest accomplishment was successfully bringing together so many different characters from different movies, and giving them all (well, pretty much all) sufficient development and screen time to ensure his audience were completely engaged in everything that was happening to and around them. No small feat, and I personally don't think there was any real weak link, but who made the biggest impression on you guys? Vote below, and be sure to elaborate in the usual place..

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrrants/news/?a=59373>